

One Day Workshop on “Criminalising Triple Talaq – Looking Beyond Religion – The Road Blocks and Road Ahead”

Date of Workshop - 16TH NOVEMBER 2019
(10 AM to 6 PM)

Introduction

In a legal system which has given personal laws a long rope for decades and until recent past of criminalising practices such as triple talaq jurisprudence in India has been evolving. The passage of Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Marriage) Act, 2019 criminalizes extra-judicial talaq of Talaq-e-biddat also known as Talaq-a-bain or triple talaq. After the enactment of this law, certain factions of society are upbeat and looking forward to criminalizing of bigamous marriages and outlawing the practice of NikahHalala. It's even argued that this shall pave way for Uniform Civil Code. India is a secular country and has personal laws that govern matters of marriage, divorce, maintenance, inheritance, adoption, guardianship, succession etc.

CRCJ (Centre for Research in Criminal Justice) of Maharashtra National Law University (MNLU) Mumbai firmly believes that Constitution of India being supreme law of the land & recognizes fundamental rights, especially of women. CRCJ (Centre for Research in Criminal Justice) also believes that it ought to work for bridging the gap of ignorance of law in the society. In furtherance of these aims CRCJ (Centre for Research in Criminal Justice) is organizing One Day Workshop on 16th November 2019 at MNLU Mumbai Campus at Powai.

About the Centre (CRCJ)

Centre for Research in Criminal Justice (CRCJ) at MNLU Mumbai was inaugurated on 13th January 2018 by Hon'ble Justice NareshPatil (Judge, Bombay High Court) and Honourable Justice A.S. Oka (Judge, Bombay High Court). The Centre strives to contribute to criminal justice system by working across theoretical, disciplinary and methodological boundaries to create innovative ways of understanding the criminal law, its interplay with society, and criminal justice. It aims at providing a theoretically grounded framework supported by an empirical research on criminal laws and processes.
